General Description of the Parkeville Hydropathic Institute. General Description of the Parleveille Hydropathic Institute.

The main building is three stories high, standing back from the street about one hundred feet, with a semicircular grass plot in front, and contains thirty to forty rooms. The grounds around the house are tastefully laid out with walks and planted with trees, shrubs, &c. On the left of the entrance to these grounds is a cottage containing four rooms, used by male patients as a bathing house, with every convenience for "packing," bathing, &c.; on the right of the entrance, about two hundred feet distant, stands a similar cottage, used by the ladies for similar purposes.

One of these is the laundry, with a hydrant at the door; the other two are occupied by the servants.

The hydrant water is introduced into these cottages as well as into the main building, and all the waste water carried off by drains under ground.

well as into the main building, and all the waste water carried off by drains under ground.

THE WATER WORKS

Consist of a circular stone building, standing on the brow of a hill, surmounted by a large cedar reservoir containing five hundred barrels, brought from a never-failing spring of pure cold water in the side of the hill, by "a hydraulic ram," a self-acting machine of cast iron, that is kept constantly going, night and day, by the descent of the water from the spring. The surplus water is carried from the reservoir to a fountain in the water-works yard, surrounded by weeping willows. In the first story of the water-works is a circular room, containing the douche both, which is a stream falling from a height of about thirty feet, and can be varied in size from half an inch to an inch and a half in diameter. Adjoining the douche room is a dressing room, with marble tables, &c. the rising douche (for the cure of piles, &c.) is one of the most complete contrivances of the kind, being entirely under the control of the patient using the same.

There are many other appliances, which can be better understood by a personal examination.

SEARS' PICTORIAL FAMILY PUBLICATIONS are decidedly the best books that agents can possibly employ their time in supplying to the people of the United States. They are valuable for reference, and should be possessed by every family in this great republic. There is not a city or town in these United States, not even those of small importance, but contains many citizens to whom these works are indispensable. They are adapted to the literary wants of the Christian, the patriot, the statesman, and the domestic circle, got up in a superior style of art and workmanship; and are not only such books as will sell, but are such as an agent of good principle will feel free to recommend, and willing to see the purchaser again after they have been bought.

sell, but are such as an agent of good principle will rest free to recommend, and willing to see the purchaser again after they have been bought.

Our Plan.—The plan the publisher has so successfully carried out for several years, is the obtaining responsible men as agents, who are well known in their own counties, towns, and villages, and have time and disposition to cir-culate good and instructive books among their neighbors and friends. Any person wishing to embark in the enter-prise will risk little in sending $25 or $50, for which he will receive an assortment as he may direct, at the whole-sale cash prices.

Enterprising and active men of respectability and good didress, would do well to engage in the sale of the above rolumes; and all postmasters, clergymen, book pedlars, and newspaper agents, are respectfully requested to act so our agents. A handsome remuneration allowed to all who engage in their sale. For particulars address, post paid, ROBERT SEARS, 128 Nassau street, N. Y.

The Baltimore and Philadelphia Steamboat Company (ERICSSON LINE)

(ERICSSON LINE)

Have resumed their operations for the year with increased means of accommodating the trade between Philadelphia and Baltimore, in the most regular and expeditious manner, and at their former materially reduced prices, being, on dry goods, hardware, &c., only 10 cents per 100 pounds, and but half the price charged by other lines.

Persons wishing to avail themselves of the facilities and moderate prices of the Line, are advised to give explicit and moderate prices of the sending their goods to the Ericsson Line, and they should be particular to possess themselves of the receipts which are invariably given for their goods. In those are stated the price charged for transportation; and it will prove a protection against the double rates exacted by other lines, who have no published rates.

Goods destined for the West, South, or other places beyond Baltimore, forwarded promptly on the day of their arrival, with every care and attention, free of all charge whatever for this service, in the shape of commissions or otherwise.

al towns in Ireland, and thus the losses by discount, and shewise, are avoided.

The Society keeps an office at No. 22 Spruce street, to which Emigrants can apply to obtain situations for which they are fitted.

Orders from employers in the country, stating the services required, the wages, and the cheapest modes of conveyance, and giving a respectable reference, will meet with prompt attention.

The Society will be thankful for all circumstantial and early information of any fraud, imposition, or outrage committed on Emigrants, and will endeavor speedily to apply a remedy.

[Correspondence of the American Telegraph.]

This having been sung by a large and capable choir with thrilling effect, the preacher, in his own peculiarly solemn and deliberate manner, said, "Let—us—pray;" and commencing with "When all thy mercies, oh, my God!" and recounting many of the most prominent mercies conferred upon mankind, which mercies, he represented, were even more numerous than the breaths we breathe, he continued somewhat as follows: "Our being still on the earth is owing to no strength of our own; for many, whose prospects for long life have been greater than we had a right to indulge in, are now reposing in the silent tomb, yet we are spared, and yet we know of nothing entitling us to the and yet we know of nothing entiting us to the favor or forbearance of the Almighty. Once more we are in God's holy temple, and once more are permitted to offer up a sincere oblation of thanksgiving and praise. O Lord! we will bless and praise thee, and laud thy holy name, because thou hast not, as yet, removed 'the light of thy countenance from us;' we have not yet lost every desire to serve thee, nor are we yet destitute of that anchor-like hope of a far more exceeding and eternal weight of Have mercy upon us, O Lord, we beglory.' eech thee; forgive our many misdeeds, and enable us to exclaim 'Abba Father.' We feel how little we have done compared to what we night have done in working out our own salvation,' and furthering the cause of Christi-anity. Let us from this time determine to change our lives, and, as professors of the religion of Christ, resolve to press toward the mark.' Oh for a holy aspiration on the part of thy church, for the holiness that will enable us to do right. Let thy blessing rest upon the unregenerate portion of this congregation, and let impressions be made here, this day, that and thy smile rest upon her.

"Let thy benediction be upon our highly favored country, and upon all those in authority destroy every evil machination tending to disdestroy every evil machination tending to dis-rupt our glorious Union, and let us not fool-ishly, rashly, and perversely throw away those blessings and privileges that have so long con-stituted us a great; happy, prosperous, re-nowned and united people; watch over and pro-tect the traveller by land or by sea; be a hus-band to the widow, a father to the orphan, a friend to the bereaved, and a present help in time of trouble to the distressed and afflicted; let the fulness of the Gentiles come, and all acknowledge Christ, from the least even unto the greatest; let thy spirit be with us—hear us and answer us for the sake and through the merits of Him who has taught us when we'pray to say, 'Our Father,' &c.'

Prayer being concluded, the preacher read, for the first lesson, from Ec. 12 c., "Remember now thy Creator in the day of thy youth;" and for the second, from Luke, 18 c., (Pharisee and Publican.) The intermediate hymn, commencing with "Come to Calvary's holy mountain, was then sung by the choir, when the preacher took for his text the 9th verse of the 119th his way. Having taken his text, the preacher referred to the words "rather than," and "a needle's eye," contained in the 14th and 25th verses of the second morning lesson, as read from Luke, ch. 18. The first, he said, should have been translated not, so as to read "and not the other," while the last had no reference to "a needle " as commonly understood but to certain small gates, called "a needle's eve," in the wall encompassing Jerusalem, which were merely designed for pedestrians to "go through." Thus premising, and intimating his purpose to continue the discourse on next Sunday evening, he entered upon the discussion of his text— Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his The first thought that strikes us, said the preacher, is, that there should be a singling out of a particular class, the interrogatory no being generical, as if their interests and welfare were alone contemplated. The question is propounded to "a young man," though the general scope and design of the Scriptures is evidently to meliorate the condition of "all the world." That was the object designed to be effected in the self-constituted mission of last to all secure the tomb against injury; Christ; yet the appeal is made to the young, ere the multitudinous and onerous concerns mortality engress their attention and vitiate their tastes-ere the stern and rugged scenes of life have arisen to blunt their sensibilities and pervert their minds-and ere they have engaged with the busy herd and teeming multitude to do evil; now their destiny is in their own hands—now their eternity-influencing task is to be undertaken-now the great arena of human existence is, for weal or for wo, to be entered upon; every man who is lost is the fabricator of his own destiny—digs the pit of his own destruction; here and now, every one of us is "treasuring up wrath against the day of wrath," or preparing for "a joy that is unspeakable.'

"Man is his own true origin of evil," The address is to the "young man." Why the young man, rather than to the middle-aged and aged? There are divers reasons why so many addresses are made to the young. It is "Rejoice, O young man, in thy youth," &c.; but recollect-recollect, "that for all these things God will bring thee unto judgment." Again, "My son, give me thy heart;" with "Good master, what shall I do to be saved?" heeded, and the appeals elicited: as the isolated and constitutional formation of the youngtheir impressibility and sensibility rendering them more susceptive of external influences than the more aged. It is for their minds that novels, those intellectual exhibitions of a perverted imagination, are mostly designedtheir fancy that is rife for any impression, ere reason and judgment have exercised their sway. with the offers of mercy, when the minister of is passing.

the gospel, armed with the armor of truth, and speaking with power, proclaims the utterly undone condition of those who persist in living without God in the world? They are the young. Oh, I tell it to you, and charge it upon you, that if you resist the truth now, the time will come when secular concerns and the wiles of Satan will so engross the attention and corrupt the heart, that though Christ himself were to appear, ye would turn away and say, "Go thy way for this time." Ask the experience of the church, and it will be found that in nine cases out of ten its members are those who embraced religion between the ages of twelve and thirty, ere their consciences had become seared or their tongues blistered by profanity—ere their blood had been corrupted by the intoxicating draught, and ere they had ceased to have a rel-ish for truth. On indulging the first vicious propensity—as uttering an oath, or taking a social glass—there was an immediate and active contest between vice and the conscience. Soon, how-ever, by reason of repetition, that which at first was regarded as "a monster of most hideous mien," was so far "embraced" that the erring one could swear, go to the bar, and even to those poisonous blotches, grog-shops, with utter recklessness. Well may God address the young; and though youth is still impressible, there is such a thing as death; and while I would win you by reason, and not affright you with "bloody bones," yet I must direct your attention to the grave-yard. Examine those marble tokens of affection—and what do they declare Such an one died in infancy, another in childhood, others in adolescency; but how many over seventy? Not one in ten—because there are but few old men, comparatively, to die. How many, in this large and attentive congregation, are there over seventy? Not ten. How many over sixty? Not a score. Where are the

The old are nowhere. It has been established by the most accurate physiological research, that half of those that physiological research, that hair of those that are born die in infancy, three-fourths before they arrive at maturity, and but few of the whole number live to see seventy. The reason why so few are old is, that they die young. And I tell you that, ere fifty years hence, this assembly, now so buoyant with youth, health, vigor, and hope, will be but a ghastly assemblage of shriveled bones. I feel that if I had not yielded to the influence of grace when young, I should long ere this have been in the grave. "Young man!" receive the truth "ere the evil days come." As young men you ought to hear and heed the interrogatory, "Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way?"

MOUNT VERNON.—We quote the following from the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, and give to it our entire and hearty assent:

Every traveller from abroad, who visits Mount Vernon, wonders at the apathy of the American government, which allows this historical place to go to decay. Something of the same feeling impresses itself on the mind even of our own money-making citizens, when, for the first time, they visit the hallowed precincts where Washington lived, and where he now re-poses in the slumber of death. The place is fast sinking to decay. The soil, long since exhausted, will not yield to the proprietor a remunerative return, and the natural consequence is that he spends little or no money in keeping the mansion in repair. He offered, last summer, to sell the estate to the United States for two hundred thousand dollars, but because the price was thought exorbitant the purchase was declined. We trust, however, that the next Congress will be more far-seeing than the last, transaction like this in the petty spirit of ped-lars, but with the wide and liberal views of consequently, to make such an investment safe, patriots and statesmen. For ourselves, we do not consider the price asked exorbitant. It is not mere common land, we must recollect, that the Government wishes to buy; it is a spot hallowed by a thousand peculiar associations. The former can be purchased, all over Virginia, for comparatively nothing; the latter can be had nowhere but at Mount Vernon.

Who can doubt that the mansion and tomb of Washington, if preserved from decay and per-petuated to future times, will, as a centre of patriotic associations, be of incalculable value to the United States. Mount Vernon might be rendered in fact almost a Palladium for the Union. An hour spent in its grounds would, to a rightly constructed mind, be a panacea against even the thought of dissolution. What Marathon is to Greece, or Bannockburn to Scotland or Tell's Chapel to Switzerland, that Mount Vernon might be rendered to the United States Let the Federal Government buy Washington's home; let it repair the mansion, restore the et it collect there all the memorials that exist of the Father of his country, his hat, his sword, his manuscripts; and let the whole be perpet uated from age to age. What a monument it would be! Think of Americans, centuries hence, walking in the very hall where Washington walked, sitting in the rooms where he sat, writing at the table where he wrote. What would not England give for such a memorial of her Alfred? How the pulses, even of Americans, would thrill if they could stand where that great law-giver of their mother country stood uges ago, if they could touch the blade he wielded, if they could read the books he read! if they could touch the blade he The purchase of Mount Vernon has often been urged upon the Federal Government: but the reasons for this purchase are now infinitely more potent than ever before. Unless the home of Washington speedily becomes public property, it will lose its distinctive features by decay, and ultimately sink into ruin. A generation or two, at most, will see every vestige of the mansion gone. The soil itself, by the failure of heirs, or the misfortunes incident to all families, may pass into strangers' hands, become divided and subdivided, and perhaps be descrated to the most pitiful purpose. The plough may pass beneath the spot where Washington died, and appeals by, the young, and many are the considerations why the exhortations should be beared and the spot where Washington died, and cupidity may set up his tomb itself to sale. What is two hundred thousand dollars, when so beared and the spot where washington died, and cupidity may set up his tomb itself to sale. We have seen that sum squandered, by Con-gress, to pay for an idle debate. Lose Mount ernon, and a thousand debates could neither bring it back nor reconcile the nation to the loss. When shall we have done with this "penny wise and pound foolish" legislation?

"WILD MAN OF THE WOODS .- A gigantic man of the woods has been discovered in Green county, Arkansas, and a party has been organized to endeavor to catch him. When last seen he was pursuing a herd of cattle, who were flying in a state of great alarm, as if pursued by a dreadful enemy. On seeing the party who discovered him, he looked at them deliberately for a short time, turned, and ran away with great speed, leaping from twelve to fourteen feet at a time. His foot-prints measured thir-teen inches each. He was of gigantic stature, the body being covered with hair, and the head with long locks, that fairly enveloped his neck and shoulders."

We doubt it. BOY KILLED BY AN ELEPHANT.-We are inormed that, during the exhibition of the menagerie in Derby, on Wednesday last, a little boy was killed by being struck with the trunk of the elephant. He was amusing himself, in company with other boys, by feeding the ele-phant with nuts and other articles, when for the sake of sport he pricked the animal upon the trunk with some sharp instrument, which enraged him, and the boy becoming frightened withdrew into the crowd. Soon after he ap-proached towards the elephant, though cautioned to keep away by the keeper, when he received a blow on the head, which injured him so severely that he died.—New Haven Journal.

GROWTH OF THE ICE TRADE .- During the year 1836, an enterprising firm in Boston shipped to Calcutta a large quantity of apples, and as a means of preserving them, they were packed in ice, and arrived out in good condition. The ice, however, proved unexpectedly a more lu-crative species of merchandise than the fruit. It was sought for with avidity. Since this period thousands of cargoes of this hot English glass, as the natives termed it, have been shipped from this State alone, and employment given, during the season, to some fifteen hun-

ADVERTISING.—The following is a good illustration of the "penny wise, pound foolish" policy which very many worthy persons still adopt: A man in Saybrook, Canada, recently had a farm for sale, and was advised to advertise it; he said he "couldn't afford it." The farm was sold for $1500; the purchaser bought "on speculation," paid $2 for advertising, and shortly afterwards sold the same farm for two thousand dollars! Comment is unnecessary.
